I want to know that, is it possible to record the audio from the android phone's microphone and play it back in real time. I am not using any streaming server for this. A: From your question it seems you want to know how to record and play audio in real time. This can be done by using the android.media.MediaRecorder and android.media.MediaPlayer. Use the MediaRecorder to record audio from the microphone. MediaRecorder returns the recorded audio in a byte array. To play the recorded audio file use the MediaPlayer. Checkout and and start learning how to use them. a time-travel machine. Also a writer, scientist, game designer and critic, my latest book (and my first) is ECHOES OF VENUS: A Novel of the Post-Human Era. Forthcoming is DEATH'S LONG SHADOW, a novel of the zombie apocalypse. Friday, May 18, 2012 On the Kindle, you're allowed to watch only one movie at a time. If you're not watching one, the device automatically switches to the next one. This is great for me, because as a director, I often put a week or more into one movie and am not willing to watch it until I've gotten all the footage I can stand. I'm going to be trying to do that with the world of games. I'm currently producing an episodic webcomic entitled 'The Dead', following a group of characters that fight and die and live and die again in a world that may not be the real world, but is certainly the world that is right now. Each issue of the webcomic will be a little story, and I
