Sumatriptan, sold under the brand name Imigran among others, is a triptan medication used to treat migraines. The recommended dose is a single 5 mg subcutaneous injection. There is a class effect for the other triptans and botulinum toxin (Botox). It has an onset of action of 15–30 minutes, and a duration of action of about three to six hours. It was first described in the scientific literature in 1995. It was approved for medical use in the United States in 2003. It is available as a generic medication. Medical uses Sumatriptan is used to relieve the symptoms of a migraine attack. Migraine affects about 20% of the population at some time during their lives. It is used for both acute treatment of migraines and prevention of migraines. It is available in the form of a 5 mg subcutaneous injection (injection of the skin).

Adverse effects Adverse effects occur at a rate of 1.7% after the first dose, and 5.5% after the second dose, and 5.4% after the third dose.

Adverse effects include nausea, vomiting, drowsiness, fatigue, and dizziness. Overdose The following should be considered an emergency: Clinical or physiological signs of an impending cardiovascular collapse. History Sumatriptan was developed in the early 1990s. It was first described in the scientific literature in 1995. It was patented in 1995, and approved for medical use in the United States in 2003. The drug is marketed under the brand name Imigran by Eli Lilly and Co. The recommended dose for migraines is 5 mg subcutaneous. It was first approved for use in the United States. A meta-analysis suggested a class effect for the triptans for pain
