Sterling Douglass, the person who reported the alleged stalking of white students by black students to the authorities back in 2007, has now been arrested for these incidents which he has been claiming had never happened. The allegations were made when a bunch of black students claimed that the white students who were accused of harassment were stalking them. During the incident, a student who was being harassed saw Douglass and his associates seemingly laughing about what was going on. The student then turned to some of the black students who were with Douglass and instead of him telling them to stop harassing her, he suggested that it would be a good idea to invite her into one of their apartments and “hang out’.” The student then left with Douglass and one of his associates. Speaking at a press conference at the time, Douglass claimed that he was filming the incident with the “agenda to let the world know that black people are not being treated fairly.” His main point in the alleged incident was to put the police “on notice,” that black students were at risk. In his own words he said “We have to start being proactive about this, we are at risk.” However, after 15 months of investigation and three trials, Douglass has now been arrested for his
