Novel target proteins of the heme exporter ABCG2 in multidrug resistance of cancer cells. ABCG2 is an ATP-binding cassette transporter that has been reported to mediate multidrug resistance (MDR) in various cancer cell lines. ABCG2 protein is expressed at an extremely high level in hematopoietic stem cells, and the exact function of ABCG2 is unclear. We established a positive control cell line (JURKAT cells) expressing high levels of ABCG2 protein. We used the JURKAT cell line and a clone lacking ABCG2 protein (JURKAT-Rev cells) to investigate specific ABCG2-related protein targets. We identified protein bands specific to the JURKAT-Rev clone in 2-DE gels, and these proteins were identified by MALDI-TOF mass spectrometry. Forty target proteins were successfully identified. We further confirmed the presence of ABCG2 in these proteins by immunoblotting. A set of the 40 proteins identified may represent novel target proteins of the drug-efflux function of ABCG2 in cancer cells. This set of proteins should be useful for investigating the mechanisms of ABCG2-mediated drug resistance in cancer cells.
