A Belfast pastor has been accused of blaspheming the Bible in a public place and putting “Mormons and Christians” in a “mood of hatred”. Mr Gary Wittens admitted shouting Bible passages during a court appearance in Belfast last month. The 46-year-old, who lives on the Holy Island on the outskirts of Stormont, also admitted contempt at a district court and was handed a six-month prison sentence and ordered to pay £1,000 in compensation. Mr Wittens, from Onslow Street, has been ordered to pay £50 in costs. He was ordered to pay compensation to an undisclosed number of Mr and Mrs Greig and Steven Pritchard in order to “restore their good name”. He also put down a claim of £5,000 to cover the cost of his legal fees. The court was told the pastor had been getting out of bed and walked into a room at the house where the Greigs had taken refuge from the snow and “shouted the words of God to himself and out into the room”. He continued to shout out verses from the Bible, including the Book of Revelation and Christ’s sacrifice on the cross, during which he “continuously referred to Mormons and Christians”. Trevor Begley, defending, told the court that at no time were any of the defendants “in any way physically threatened” by the pastor. He said the pastor was not “on a large scale” and “did not believe the defendants were aware of what was being said”. The pastor also said he was not aware of the “volume of comments” made by him. He said he was “truly sorry” for his actions but “did not feel that it was appropriate” and it was only the Greigs who had complained and the incident was “entirely the consequence of drinking”. In the public interest, Judge Philip Murney was told that the defendant was raising funds for two church groups in Belfast. It was also said that none of the defendants had ever heard the pastor shout Bible verses before and said they “felt totally defamed by his actions”. Judge Murney said that the “loud, public and lengthy shouting in his bedroom” had “
