The FIFA 22 team has carefully studied all aspects of the new real-life motion capture data to make sure that it behaves and feels just like a real football game, and adds unparalleled elements. New Features A more complete conversion of the real-life gameplay motions and reactions means that all the actions that players take can be processed more rapidly, making the ball move more quickly.

Real-life players making tackles will take the weight of their opponent, causing the momentum to slow their fall, adding a layer of realism that can be felt by all. The team has also taken an unrivaled approach to tackling in FIFA 22, making it extremely difficult to master. Part of the excitement of playing a FIFA game is that it feels like you are in the game, and so to up this feeling, the team has included realistic animations, like the way players duck, dive and glide. This, combined with the rag doll physics the team has worked on, creates a football match that feels faster, closer and more intense than ever. The ball will feel heavier in FIFA 22. The team worked with the current Laws of the Game to make the ball heavier, which makes passing feel more valuable and adds to the excitement of playing. More expressive player animations have been created to increase realism. Running animations show off the players' movements, through their hips, and down to their toes. When a player is hit, there will be a subtle reaction, and the player will react to the hit and recover more quickly. More dynamic weather conditions and lighting. Cloudy day and night lighting, more intense snowstorms, clearer rain, the FIFA 22 team has included some of the best scenes around and has used real-life environments to make everything feel more realistic. New Improvement Tools FIFA 22 has been improved to make day/night mode and full-screen modes look more realistic. For those who want to enjoy FIFA in true HD, the team has built a dynamic stadium mode. The stadium of your choice will be updated in real-time while gameplay is in progress, with the ability to unlock new stadiums and make team your own by changing kits and logos. Making your stadium a part of FIFA 22 is easy - visit the Matchday Online Hub or the Create Club mode, and your stadium will be displayed in the list. You will be able to select your stadium and work with the team to make it your own

The ball is feeling bigger, stronger, and more precise, allowing for more realistic ball control and passes. Players are feeling more responsive, with greater strength and more weight behind each touch. On contact, the ball will bounce differently, so whether you're crossing it in, shooting it, dribbling past defenders, or passing to teammates; you'll feel the sensation. In addition, each player has improved animations, allowing them to do more things with the ball, bringing the game closer to real life. Engineering Manager Alex Young is thrilled with what the team has achieved with FIFA 22. "One of the biggest challenges has been to 'drop the ball' and allow the football world to come through," he says. "Every time you play a ball, we want it to behave exactly as it would in real life." The foundation of FIFA 22's new engine is a new fluidity system, enabling realistic physical movement and collisions. FIFA 21 was the first FIFA game to employ the fluidity system, and it made a huge impact on how the game played. In FIFA 22, fluidity is the foundation of the game. Players will be able to use their moves more freely, with greater fluidity in pass and dribbling. It's important to us that
