local 1 foo.rb local 2 bar.rb local 1 baz.rb local 3 quux.rb local 1 str1.rb local 1 str2.rb But when a value is extracted, we get a backtrace (STDOUT): >>> eval 'puts Foo.new.quux' str1.rb:8:in `puts': undefined method `quux' for nil:NilClass (NoMethodError) from /lib/ruby/1.8/gems/1.8/gems/str1.rb:8 from /lib/ruby/1.8/irb.rb:169 from :1:in `require' from :1

Let's change it to use object#instance_eval instead: But, when we use object#instance_eval, we get a backtrace (STDOUT): >>> eval "puts Foo.new.instance_eval 'quux'" str1.rb:8:in `puts':
undefined method `instance_eval' for nil:NilClass (NoMethodError) from /lib/ruby/1.8/gems/1.8/gems/str1.rb:8 from /lib/ruby/1.8/irb.rb:169 from :1:in `require' from :1
Why is #instance_eval so much more expensive when a value is inserted? A: I'm pretty sure that's what a backtrace is (since you get one when you try to put and one when you try to eval).
If you want to get rid of the backtrace altogether, then look into the object#instance_eval method. There are likely to be better ways of achieving what you want, but it's impossible for me to tell without seeing how you want to use it. What I'd advise against would be using eval to achieve what you want to do. A: The things that can be done with eval are discussed in "Runtime's Gotcha #1: eval!" in the Ruby on Rails Guide, third edition. You'll probably want to

. A: Si bien tienes un certificado de primera clase para que esta funcione de forma autentica, este no es suficiente. Hay una estrategia fraudulenta de esta técnica que para ejecutarla incluso necesita del acceso a una página web y otra más que te puede afectar. Cierra todas aplicaciones que no son necesarias para el juego En el punto 4 citado, explican que la mejor opción es cerrar todas las aplicaciones abiertas, pero no es eso. Todo lo que hace es ocultar o desactivar todas las aplicaciones abiertas como esas que muestra en la imagen. Hay estudios que demuestran que uno podrÃa almacenar y reutilizar esa informaciÃ³n para hacer trampas en cuanto se pierda tu conexiÃ³n con el entorno en el que estÃ©s jugando. A la hora de "hacer historia", en los equipos mÃ³viles, intente cerrar la sesiÃ³n y abrirla de nuevo para hacer la prÃ³xima partida. Esto te salvarÃa mÃ¡s tiempo comparado con intentar hacer ejecuciÃ³n a un archivo. Si cierras la sesiÃ³n en algÃºn entorno, intenta volver a abrirla en otra pantalla. Si eso no funciona, en el punto 5 pone que puede elegir entre pasar mÃ¡s tiempo o elegir otra contraseÃ±a. Captura de pantalla Por Ãºltimo, el segundo tipo de tÃ©cnica que se abre paso, es la de usar un acceso de correo criptogrÃ¡fico para c
